SGA! OVERTHROWN IN BLOODLESS COUP

By Pat E. O. Furniture

In a bloodless coup last Thursday, the 1987-1988 SGA executive board was replaced with a new leadership junta. Immediately after siezing power the new executive junta, headed by Biff Jones (Greenwich, CT - 1989), suspended the SGA constitution, proclaimed a day of "rejoicing for the oppressed community of Connecticut College" and promised imeadiate sweeping reform. The Coup was carried out swiftly and bloodlessly when the self-styled revolutionaries broke into the SGA Assembly's regular Thursday night meeting and, brandishing various clubs while shouting "vive la revolution", surrounded members of the SGA executive board and locked them into the nearby weight-room. Simultaneous attacks by other groups of revolutionaries also captured the campus radio station, the College Noise offices, the campus bar, and the Security guard shack.

In a confused and raving speech broadcast over WCNI on Friday morning, and later reprinted in a special issue of "The College Noise" new SGA President Jones declared his revolution a "stunning success" brought on by the "leftist pinko orientation" of the old leadership. According to Jones the new Executive board will "wipe out this bogus radical threat and rebuild Conn into a really cool place that reflects the traditional values of America". As his first official act, Jones announced over the air that he was appointing himself "President and Party Chairman for life" The new SGA President then announced that he was "strongly recommending

On Monday, President Oakes Ames named Bufort Jones the new head of Campus Security. In a well attended ceremony at the "Pinkie" shack, Ames announced in his inspirational warble that "a new...um..direction is going to take us someplace neat." and that "he seems like such a big strong man I know he will do fabulously."

Jones is a former Law enforcement official in the Lousiana parish of St. Michael's. Jones' most recent position, however, was with the G. Gordon Liddy anti-Terrorist School in the desert outside of Yuma, Arizona. This experience convinced Jones of the need design proposed for the new new admissions building

WOW!! NEW LOOK FOR CAMPUS! CONN. GOES 12TH CENT. GOTHIC!

By C. King Bale

In an effort to compete with the big league Ivys, Connecticut College has invested much time and effort into the planning of the new admissions building to be completed by the fall of 1992.

The design for the building was approved by the newly formed Committe on Campus Edifice Construction headed by President of the College Oakes Ames. Based upon a scale model of the 12th century French Chartres Cathedral, the committe hopes to "make Conn look like a regular Yale within 50 years."

"The current admissions building behind Harkness dormitory is made out of wood, cement, glass and a lot of tiny bits of metal and other technical terms," said designer of the new building, Eugene Viollet-le-Duc. But the new one, whoa, we're talking huge slabs of limestone and granite, two enormous spires about 400 feet up in the sky. This baby'll stretch around 470 feet long and 200 feet wide; it'll just crush that puny nothing of a little admissions building they've got there now!"

In addition to the two 400 foot spires on the north facade there will be over 29 stained-glass windows and a 59 foot diameter rose-window.

President of the College, and Committee Chariman Ames seems excited, "What's all that construction going on out there anyhow; it keeps a body awake all day!"

Also being proposed in the Committe is the possibility of a renovation of the Crozier-Williams Student Center. Up until last week there were two plans being considered, but yesterday the design by architect Justinian Ravenna was rejected, leaving Abbot Suger's proposed renovation plan to be voted upon next Tuesday.

When asked why he thought his plan was accepted, Suger commented, "Well, you see, I knew that the board was looking for a more Western European Gothic style of archetecture than Ravanna was offering. He walked into that room, feeling so puffed and prideful over his flimsy replica of the Hagia Sophia. All them members sat looking at him and just frowned; I knew he was out of the game at that point. No one planning a middle Gothic campus motieff wants a huge Byzantine pile of rocks sitting in the midst of thoses

AMES'S SECRET DESIRE! EVANGELISM STOLE HIS SOUL

THE UNTOLD STORY!

By DeJesus Leves

In a routine 3AM sweep of college President Oaks Ames' office last Thursday, the College Noise "I" team discovered that the retiring President is planning to begin a new career as a Christian television evangelist. This startling revelation comes from a cassette tape of telephone conversations found in the top drawer of Ames' desk. Affixed to this tape was a note saying "Louise, destroy this tape". Most of the tape contains standard telephone conversations between the President and various callers (It was not previously known that the President likes his wife to call him "boo-boo"). One 18 minute section of the tape, however, contains a conversasion between the President and a Mr. Jim-Bob Swiggett, a professor of faith healing at Oral Roberts Univ. and recent Michael Jackson tour promoter.

During his conversation with Jim-Bob Swiggett, President Ames is heard expressing his excitement over joining "people like Jim and Tammy-Faye Baker in a religious crusade for good!". Ames went on to explain his strategy of becoming a "Episcopalian evangelist who could rally the godless Preppies and Wasps of the east coast to join in a crusade for goodness and old-time values." THE COLLEGE NOISE MAY 9, 1988 PAGE 2

To the editor,

I never thought I would find myself writing to the college noise. That is, until last friday night.

I am a senior at a small New England college. I am attractive with a 5' 11" muscular frame, blond hair, blue eyes, and what I would call a well written sports section. Recently, however, I have found myself in the depths of a sexual slump.

I had just resigned myself to another unsuccessful evening of reading your paper when someone knocked on my door. Muffy, a leggy brunette that lived three doors away, opened the door and peered inside. She explained that her BMW wouldn't start and asked if I could help. I said it was probably the fetzer valve and that I would help after I finished the new editors article on sexual harrassment. She seemed interested and sat down to read along.

Frankly, the authors unbelievable descriptions of professors dropping trow in class got us both very excited. I looked up and our eyes met. By her expression I could see that her connthought was investigating more than my cover story. Although I can not go into further detail, I will say that my column has never had such a thorough editing.

Sincerely,

I. M. Fun

To The editor,

I am writing a letter to the editor to criticise the letters to the editor that have appeared in the College Noise throughout this year.

It is appalling to me that everytime a contributor to the paper produces a bad piece that obviously lacks effort, sensitivity, and intelligence they are immediately subject to verbal castration by the community. I would like to stick up for these people.

I know how hard it is to perform tasks such as spelling and thinking. I also know how easy it is to get caught up in the party circuit, often forgetting either to do a job or that there is a job to do. I realize that it is hard to follow through in our respective duties and reach actual performance.

I have fallen victim to these pressures and can identify with the writers that approach their job as if it doesn't really matter. Although by admitting all these faults it is impossible for me to reveal my identity, I can say that I speak from experience after being president of Connecticut College for fourteen years. In the furture, try to be more understanding.

Sincerely,

Anonymous

To the editor,

I am replying in regard to y'all's article of last week lambasting the Registrar's office. It appears that y'all have no...no...(hic)...no idea what we go through over here in Fanning. The days are long, hard, and dry. Sorting through all those drop...(hic-hic)...drop slips makes a guy pretty thirsty. Maybe y'all should think about the sort of pressures an office goes through before y'all...y'all...(hic)...y'all criticize like you did.

Just think what aproblem you students pose for me. All y'all ever think about is classes! The classes you're taking now...(hic), the classes you want to add, the classes you want to drop, or...or...(hic-hic)...or the classes you wanna take next semester. The idea of y'all taking all those classes gives me the...the...(hic)...the creeps. Why don't y'all makes our lives a bit easier and cut down that course load! That way we'll all have less paperwork. {Hic}...Y'all will keep them damn teachers off my back and since y'all won't be taking as many classes, shoot; there won't be as many of 'em to drop when that...that...(hic)...damn drop period comes around.

Really, its enough to drive a man to drink, uh I mean to the brink. Life is too short for y'all to spend it sitting around in some 'ole class room or for me to spend in this office. I hope that you...(hic)...you students can come to y'all's senses and realize that what we need is less paperwork and more time to drink, uh I mean think, yeah thtat's right think.

Sincerely,

Anonymous

To the editor,

I like your newspaper alot. Its a really great way to keep up on campus things and stuff. I put it right up there with the "The Plain Truth" and the "Weekly World News". I mean you guys are great. Any chance that I could write for next year's issue. My friends tell me I am a dynamic writer.

Sincerely,

Ralph

To the editor,

You are all sick. I beg you to get therapy.

Sincerely,

Brain Deadeson

ASK 'THE NOISE' Q&A

Q Is Peter Teveskov really operating a burrito stand on the boarder of Texas and Mexico and employing illegal aliens?

A No. The College Noise believes Mr. Teveskov is the founder and chairman of the Department of Urban Managment for the Unionization of Kolleges, otherwise known as D. U. M. F. U. K.

Q Is Chuck Richards really head of security and special entertainment for Jimmy Swaggert?

A No. The College Noise believes Mr. Richards and Jessica Hahn have started a femine hygiene products distribution company in Skokie, IL.

Q Is it faster to Boston or by bus?

A The College Noise traveler editors have found that is better to take your lunch to school than to walk.

Q Are Frank Perdue and Ed Koch the same people?

A Yes. Extensive genetic research done by The College Noise has shown that indeed, Frank Perdue and Ed Koch really are the same people.

Q Is the College Noise really the premier publicattion on campus ?

A Of course it is you twit.

Of late the adminstration has fired or asked to leave several middle managers at Conn. College. The College Noise thinks it is Springtime. The incrementalness of Snapper's Rototiller in unexceptable.

Furthermore, Philip's Curve notwithstanding and speaking metaphysically, the cultural relativity of paper cuts adds a new dimension to pre-natal care in the post nuclear age.

To even further complicate the situation, a New York Times poll reveals definitively that he who goes to bed with an itchy butt wakes up with a smelly finger, and that in 1987 more people died from missing lungs than sudden total weight loss.

However, these events have been augmented by the sub-terranian bio shock that accompanies all election years. But the point still remains, "Mambo dog in the banana patch". Where do babies really come from?

And thus, we can unequivocally state: you have a friend in Pennsylvania.

THE FIRST EVER CONN. COLLEGE I.Q. TEST! DRUGS! DRUGS! DRUGS!

By Julie Betsy BFd

Ex-Associate Editor / Publisher / Executive Ex-Officio Emeritus Of the fund
Inc., Ltd. International

As an exclusive to the College Noise and as a service to absolutely no one, several of the members of the College Counseling Service and myself have worked to formulate the first Connecticut College I.Q. test. However, because of time constraints I was only allowed to confer with the counselors for two and a-half minutes. The remaining work was done in conjunction with the Psyche Labrotory Rats. The DRUGS, DRUGS, DRUGS, thing was just to get Senior Staff to take the test, don't panic, and feel no need to urinate in a cup, keep reading. Please circle your answers.

1. Connecticut College was founded on the principle that:

- a) Women can party too.
- b) Saabs, BMWs and Mercedes are only cool if you own one before your eighteenth birthday.
- c) Lazy political extremists need a place to be cynical about.
- d) Stepping stones for short-sighted administrators are good.
- e) Why not?

ANSWER: E

2. Connecticut College needs:

- a) More people to talk about what it needs.
- b) More buildings that directly increase the SAT scores of your average Conn student.
- c) More fluff, less substance, because SAT scores are an inescapable reality.
- d) To overreact to parental or student reports of drinking and drug use on campus and ignore student pleas for better counseling services, more social space and greater effort by the whole faculty to become involved with student life outside the class.
- e) A hole in the collective head.

ANSWER: E. Trick question, a through d are the same answers.

3. The words "majority student" are:

- a) A polite way of calling someone fat.
- b) A liberal term for WASP or a conservative term to remind everyone who rules in a democracy.
- c) A term which, with the word "minority", glosses over distinctions between differing cultures and allows Conn to remain ethnic-free.
- d) A way of categorizing the number of students who get ill after eating Harris' egg plant parmigiana.
- e) actually spelled "magority stooudent"

ANSWER: A. So lay off that second helping of pasta.

4. Harassment of any nature is:

- a) Good in moderation and with a slice of cheese cake.
- b) An ideal subject for which to make a committee.
- c) Bad because nature does not deserve harassment.
- d) A major problem in society.
- e) Is to be expected if you deliver pizzas on campus.

ANSWER: C, it is a safe answer on a hot topic, plus we hurt the environment too much as it is.

5. Pepsi is now served in the dining halls because:

- a) Four out of five SGA members don't like the new Coke.
- b) The SGA Executive Board is getting kickbacks and free, diet mandarin orange slice.
- c) Soda only costs three cents per serving and juice costs eight cents per serving.
- d) Who cares?
- e) Pepsi deteriorates your teeth at a faster rate than Coke and all of SGA are budding dentists.

ANSWER: D. only that other college paper cared.

6. Why did the union fail?

- a) Custodians really like to clean up stale beer, vomit and toilet paper after keg parties.
- b) Faculty and Students stifled the union with too much support.
- c) By coincidence, a union-busting lawyer from New Haven happened to be on Campus attending a student flute recital preceding the vote.
- d) The staff may be the only constituency of which the vast majority of its members are neither self-serving, ambitious or apathetic at the expense of the entire college community.

e) Everyone remotely associated with the reasons behind the need for a union was beheaded.

ANSWER: D hands down.

7. What is 3:2 ?

- a) A teaching plan which allows faculty more time for barbeques.
- b) A teaching plan which allows faculty more time at the beach and on the slopes.
- c) A teaching plan which allows faculty more time for barbeques.
- d) A teaching plan which, well, um, is, well it's bad.
- e) A teaching plan which allows faculty more time for barbeques.

ANSWER: E and E only.

8. Crozier-Williams was designed:

- a) Specifically to host mass weddings performed by the Reverend Moon.
- b) By Alferdo Benini, who now manages a Dunkin Donuts in Kissimmee, Florida and is known by his friends as Big Sid.
- c) To make Lazarus look good.
- d) To be the first mainland housing complex for lepers.
- e) By the cousin of Jerry "the Knife" Schickel, Southeastern Connecticut's largest aluminum siding dealer. (All orders cut on the premises).

9. Why did Conn. turn Co-ed?

- a) Because Connecticut College for Women is too long a name.
- b) All the other colleges called Conn. a "girlie school".
- c) The Coast Gaurd Academy had run out of sea men.
- d) It didn't.
- e) Co-education makes for a well-rounded student and it was a shame to waste single rooms.

ANSWER: A and now they call us UCONN.

10. Final question kids. Where will Connecticut College be in twenty years?

- a) Filing for chapter eleven with debtors including the Firehouse Cafe', Mike's Towing, and the Conn. Administrative Alumni Severance Fund.
- b) Conn College will be the latest member of the Big Ten NCAA football conference, with the Conn. Dome located in what is now the Arboretum.
- c) Conn. College will be in New London, between Mohegan and Williams streets.
- d) In a last ditch effort to become Williams or Amherst, Conn. will have moved its campus to western Massachusetts.
- e) Connecticut College will be an ever-popular, well-rounded College, diverse in thought and composition and continuing to mature.

ANSWER: C is safe bet, but give yourself two extra-credits and two sentimental points for answer E.

If you answered all seven correctly you are a genius, probably a scorpion or capricorn and are set for a career in Conn.'s P.R. office.

If you answered four to six correctly you are sharp, but not sharp enough, I suggest you stare at the new admissions building and try and figure out a way to pay for it.

If you answered only three correctly you are slow, real slow, report to the Registrar's office immediately. Hand them the results of this test and they will hire you on the spot.

If you answered only two correctly, bag the I.Q. thing and rely on your personality. If you have no personality, relax, you're a shoe-in for corporate America, or a position in athletics.

If you answered one or none correctly run to the old Admission's Building, yell your thanks and then begin to taunt them mercilessly by screaming "nya, nya, nya, nya, nya, you goofed". Then force yourself to drink a large cup of the new lemonade in Cro and give thanks that Conn. is great at developing potential.

GUIDE TO LOCAL EATS

By Mike Hunt

Most Connecticut college students eat. As an investigative journalist I found that out by going to the dinning halls and carefully observing students. Their behavior confirmed the aforementioned statement. While New London has long been a haven for college students and the myriad activities are well known, not many students are aware of the untapped cornecopia of new restaurants in the area. I recieved my assignment in the editor's office, "HARD COPY", was all the grizzled old slavedriver said. I was to report on the untapped cornecopia of new restaurants in the area.

The Bank Street Boys is the first establishment I encountered. I was treated to fine Hawaiian fare in style, the tables are placed in and around piles of greasy Harley Davidson sprockets, chains and carborateurs. Fully assembled choppers hang from the ceiling, complementing the tropical plants and bird life. The birds appeared to be Hawaiian friut bats, but I could'nt be sure.

One can also get a tatoo while waiting for their meal to arrive. I declined this pleasent invitation because I did'nt want to spoil my sensitive palette.

The seafood is great, the roast pig, (cooked in the boys own indoor pit) was superb. The only shortcoming with the meal was the measly amount of poi I received with the #2 combo. other than that slight shortcoming I had an enjoyable meal in a swell atmosphere for a reasonable price. Michael Ho (no relation), one of the boys, reminded me that they also do extensive catering. Keep them in mind for your next block party. The Bank Street Boys is located at 666 Bank Street, New London.

My next meal decidedly much less satisfactory. I'd prefer not to talk about it. NEVER EVER, I MEAN NEVER EVER GO TO THE BEER AND BEEF BARN!!!!!!!!!!!! YOU'LL REGRET IT FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE!!!! HEED THIS JOURNALIST'S WARNING AND FOREVER DINE IN PEACE.

After a few weeks of rest and a complete gastro-intestinal replacement operation, which by the way was paid for by the the Beer and Beef Barn, I was ready to resume my quest. I proceeded to the New Leaf Restaurant, located next to the rubble pile on peqout avenue in New London. The New Leaf is making a name for itself with its country style Cantonese. I think it may be the best this repoter has ever had. As I entered the restaurant I was immediately greeted by head chef Jimmy Cho's whole family, even his grandmother who by her account is 207 years old. The dinning room is elegant, pictures of the chairman dominate most of the wall space, and scattered around are those gold dragons chinese restaurants are famous for. The minimal atmosphere, Jimmy explained, causes less distraction so the guest may concentrate on the food. This may be so as the food was excellent.

I don't really know what I had to eat because the waiter brings food to the table immediately,, there is no odering involved. Jimmy says this takes care of the hassle of trying to decide. At the end of the meal one pays the appropriate price, which is whatever Jimmy's grandmother thinks you owe. my meal cost me twenty bucks and my Casio watch, but it was well worth it.

My final dinning experience occured at Salty Ed's, a favorite of the voyagers of the seas that have the good fortune to put-a-shore in New London. Salty's had only opened three days before I went their, so their weren't to many old seamen in the place. In fact I was Salty Ed's first customer. What a great life I thought, as Salty Ed blew a stench of alcohol and ciger smoke into my face. "Hiya sailor, I'm Ed and this is my place".

My prize for being the first customer was a free meal. This was a good thing because I would'nt have paid a cent for the shit Ed wanted to call food. the clam chowder, which was the chef's daily special, tasted like the chef. My filet Mignon looked and tasted like synthetic meat paste, and I could'nt figure out why my Key Lime pie was white with black speckles. This is a big zero in my book, the food was bad and the Salty Ed was worse. I dont recommend this dump to anyone.

There are many fine places to dine in New London, these new restaurants are just a sample of what can be found on any street in town. Granted most are excellent, (New London should be proud), but some need work before this reporter returns.

Its been a long hard Fresman year. Don't you owe yourself a SAAB?

DAMN COLLEGE KIDS AND THEIR DOPE

GUINNESS FEVER HITS CONN., HARD!

STUDENTS RUN AMUCK!

BY V. NECK

After two Connecticut College students broke the World record disc toss this week a rash of "copy-cat" stunts plagued the relatively calm campus in New London. Campus Safety handled scores of complaints about the would-be record breakers.

"Thoses kids were going crazy...I have'nt seen anything like it since those horrible years of the late sixties...kids runnin' around out of their minds", one campus safety officer was quoted as saying.

The record attempts were indeed quite odd; one student ate four hundred smoke detectors before he was subdued. When told that there is no Guinness record for this feat he replied, "The first few I swallowed whole but then I started chewin' them up.." He was later charged 60,000 dollars by the College for all the destroyed smoke alarms.

Another student tried to see how many of his friends could fit into the Conn Cave but was informed afterwards that SAC still held the record. It got so bad that the Guinness field agent responsible for verification had to post a list of the feats acceptable to the organization. One student who shall remain anonymous was quoted as saying, "That Guinness guy is a jerk. He told me my feat was'nt in the book and that I should be placed in a correctional facility!" The student's act was so disgusting it won't be reported here, as bestiality is not something to be taken lightly. There is a rumor that certain members of SGA are forming a committee to investigate this incident.

What will the future hold for these types of stunts? College President Oakes Ames said of the incidents, "Oh you know Conn students; today its Guinness feats and tomorrow it will be something ridiculous like divestment ...It happened at Wesleyan, it could be some sort of pattern." Ames' wife, Louise, was surprizingly unavailable for comment.

SPECIAL TO THE NOISE:

RELIGION AT CONN

ARE WE ALL GOING TO HELL?

By Ignatius Loyola

Dirk Heldstein, Rabbi Emeritus of the College Noise, was quoted as saying today: "Religion on campus has dramatically declined in its influence on the minds of students and there is no place to get lean corn beef in New London." He went on to say, "Not since 1972, when one student claimed to have had a discussion with the Virgin Mary at a barbeque at Cro Pit has there been any reports of epiphany experiences on campus."

Heldstein's concern is not altogether unwarranted. His close counterpart and drinking companion, Father Larry Lapointe, has also expressed his grave concern over the state of religion at Conn. "Students rarely take advantage of the benefits religion has to offer—wafers and wine at every service, spiritual fulfillment and divine guidance, and a free toaster oven after two years of good faith." Father Larry is hoping to see a renewed spiritual unity on campus and is willing to do just about anything to achieve it. "We are hoping to sponsor, in affiliation with SGA, something akin to the crusades of the Middle Ages, where those students who choose not to subscribe to religion because of plain and simple apathy, will be flogged and beheaded." Heldstein views this proposal as being both extreme and titillating. Yet, many refuse to acknowledge the validity of Lapointe's plan, believing it only an expedient to a problem that needs deeper consideration. Lapointe's reaction to this opposition was acrimonious and voiced in Latin: "Deus Ignovi sunt qui inermis", which loosely translates "God, Pardon those who are unarmed. He then continued his rebuttle in French, simply to prove he was multilingual.

Those who disapprove of Lapointe's tactics are stalwart in their position and still claim that the Father has delusions of being Charles Manson and drives an eighteen-wheeler around campus hitting those students who appear impious. Heldstein could only comment directly, saying "Father Larry looks nothing like Charles Manson and he never once asked me to borrow my eighteen-wheeler."

"We must take up as against S.O.A.R.", exhorted Father Larry, who still believes S.O.A.R. stands for Students Organized Against Religion. He concluded his verbal invective by adding, "and why don't we have a group on campus which attacks the problem of racism?"

Was it not the eminent philosopher and theologian, Martin Buber who said "Apathy stinks"? Whether one agrees with Father Lapointe or not, apathy has surfaced as a serious dilemma in regards to religious life on campus. All that can be said is "something must be done" and all that we can do is pray that the school hires a new organist so that those students who do attend services don't leave tone deaf. Amen.

THE BODY PERFORMS TO ENTHUSIASTIC MASS IN CHAPEL

THE BODY: JAMMING WITH JESUS AT CONN.

By Lucy Ferr

Are you tired of the same old campus bands? Tired of going to a party to find the same band playing the same music...again. Are you ready for something completely different? The Body is perhaps the most innovative, inspirational group of musicians to have materialized at Conn. in along time. The Body is an energetic, hard-driving rock and roll band with Zeppelinesque overtones. Throw in the bands willingness to improvise on stage and you've got a group that sizzles with electricity. Ask any of the four band members what the secret of their success is and they'll simply tell you its their unwavering faith in the Lord God. "We're christians", explains bassist Mathew Turnbow, "spreading the word of God through our music". "We realize we're a little different from other bands on campus", says drummer Mark Moon, but we believe the Lord brought us together for a reason".

Different indeed, The Body, short for The Body of Christ, has racked up an impressive list of original songs. In fact their latest collaborations, "Words made flesh", has found its way onto the christian airwaves here in New London. "Its not uncommon for us to flip through the bible or the hymnal to try and to rework some old psalms or hymns that we can put to rock and roll and jam to", explains lead guitarist Luke Tubbs. The band works from a repertoire of between thirty and forty songs, yet no one song is ever played the same way twice. This is due to the bands incredible talent for improvisation. "All four of us can play off each other, so alot of the time no one knows what is coming next", said John "the Baptist" Cain. "it's as if we take part in the miracle of creation every time we go on stage. "it takes some veteran musicians to be able to improvise like we do", continues Luke, "Mathew and I grew up together, and we were playing in the same sunday school band before we were twelve".

The group has had a hard time catching campus attention. "We think or christian image may scare people away", said Mathew and Mark, "plus most of our gigs are on Saturday and Sunday mornings in the chapel. "Most students have a hard time making it on Sunday morning" said Luke. The Body does have a small devoted following that attends shows regularly and often make bootlegs tapes that are sold in the bookstore. "We are not trying to press are music on anyone", said John, Luke, Mathew and Mark in unison, "we just believe that if you are committed to the daily presence of the Lord in your lives, and you need an outlet for your spirituality, you should come give us a listen."

ORTHODOX JUDAISM SWEEPS CAMPUS!

By Buzz Snyder

Dirk Heldstein, Rabbi Emeritus of the College Noise, was named Coordinator of Jewish Affairs by President Ames last week. Donning a Yarmulke, the traditional Jewish skullcap, Ames announced the new appointment from the steps of Harkness Chapel and stated "Don't I look like the Pope with this thing on?"

Heldstein's appointment resulted from a sudden wave of Jewish consciousness amongst the Jewish student population. The sudden consciousness prompted nearly half of the over thirty percent Jewish students at Conn. to dress up in nineteenth century Lithuanian, Hassidic attire and storm Fanning second floor screaming that Dean Phil Ray was the living embodiment of the Midrash, the Jewish Code of Law. The protesters siezed Dean Ray and sold him for three sheep skins and a rams horn. The Dean was last seen wandering naked in the arboretum claiming to have found the secret to eternal life and to making a five-minute tuna casserole.

Heldstein said he was pleased with his new position and saw potential for strengthening Jewish identity on Campus. To that end, Heldstein said he would begin implementing some of the proposals that had been discussed in this past in addition to his own new ideas. Stating that he thought the former Dean of the College Herb Atherton "had his heart in the right place" when he suggested that Jewish identity could be increased by providing yellow stars to Jewish students, Heldstein implied that the administration might not be in tune to the nuances of the problem.

Heldstein has a plan for using part of his administrative budget to build a drive-through chapel annex, to provide students with one-stop Jewish spirituality. "I see it as a combo synagogue and Henny Penny. My hope is that someday we'll be able to handle Bar-Mitzvahs and receptions in a drive-thru format so people will never have to leave their cars. When asked to comment why he thought so many Jews on campus did not have a strong sense of Jewish Identity, Heldstein commented "There is no place to get lean corn beef in New London."

RESEARCH SHOWS- SEX AND SPORTS DON'T MIX!

George Washington University's Sexual Activity Clinic recently confirmed that engaging in sexual intercourse while playing sports may diminish an athlete's performance.

"Engaging in sexual intercourse while playing a sport not only may hinder the player's performance, but puts the athlete's partner at great risk- depending of course upon what sport is being played at the time," said Doctor Leo Romaine. Dr. Romaine's conclusions are based on an experiment involving forty-five female and male athletes and their sexual partners at Colorado State University (CSU).

"I never even considered the issue until I was watching my daughter's track meet and observed the athletes involved with the javelin throw actually having sex while they were competing," said Romaine who conducted his experiment with Ms. Lori Yes of the CSU athletic staff.

"It seems intercourse effects athletes more in individual sports" says Romaine. Romaine pitted three tennis players with average skill against three players with far greater talents. However, the three better players were asked to engage in intercourse during the game. "It [the intercourse] seemed to greatly affect their tennis game. It particularly affected the quality of their serves."

The real danger according to the study involves the safety of the athlete's partners. Four men nearly drowned in the experiment with the two women's water polo teams said Romaine. "The football experiment was a real mess too" he added. It is reported the NCAA may respond to these dangers with a new "Safe sex, Safe game" media blitz in the fall.

DARTMOUTH DITCHES URINALS

Hanover N.H.: Dartmouth today announced plans to "prepare the College to aggressively face the social challenges of the 1990's". In a prepared statement Dartmouth President introduced the plan as a "tremendous step forward and socially conscious poggessive concept." The plan, as outlined by the Dartmouth Committee for Social Awareness, calls for the removal of urinals located in the Women's bathrooms on campus and their replacement with standard toilets. The move will allow Dartmouth women to sit down while going to the bathroom for the first time since their admission to Dartmouth.

SMALL COLLEGES TURN TO SELLING DIPLOMAS!

(CPS): In response to sagging endowments and slow gift giving on the part of alumni, small colleges are beginning to hold "fire sales" on diplomas. Says one Admissions Director of a prestigious small New England College "It is a great idea, Its an idea whose time has come."

Although the plans vary from college to college the concept is generally the same. For half the price of four years tuition a student can now buy a diploma from the graduating class of his or her choice. The colleges save countless dollars on overhead, while the students enjoy the full benefits of a college degree at half the cost and less than an eighth of the time. Tate College has the oldest and most progressive diploma selling program. "Everyone loves it" says Jim Paxed, Tate President. "The registrar takes longer lunches now, and our facilities budget actually provides surplus income each year as we rent out the unused dorms and library for catered events." Tate student Jane Peach agrees "It was great, I applied early decision, got in, went to registration to pick my major and recieved my diploma as soon as my folks paid the tuition. I chose a double major History and Nuclear physics with a philosophy minor. I got a great Liberal Arts education in less than two weeks and graduated with a 3.8!" Ms. Peach says she plans to work on Wall Street for a year "I admire their ethics and their clothes" and then plans to buy her Masters in English and possibly go on to get her Phd.

HARVARD STUDENTS HURT IN FREAK MISHAP

(CPS) In a bizzare twist of fate, Harvard students attending the 450th celebration of the prestigious Universtiy last week were attacked by their own egos and their potential earning power. Forty students were hurt in the melee, when one student began to brag that he would be making over 75,000 dollars within 18 months. Other students quickly jumped into the fray and soon their combined potential earnings overwhelmed them.

Doctors treating the students at Mass. General commented that the mysterious attack was frightening because it took them over five years to make 75,000 dollars annually.

WESLEYAN SECEDES FROM ITSELF!

MIDDLETOWN CT; Earlier this week, in an unprecedented show of campus unity, the Wesleyan student body voted to secede from itself, marking the first time there had been any semblance of consensus amongst the student body since the late fifties. The move, which involves the establishment of over two-thousand indepedent Wesleyan Student Bodies, comes on the heel of the recent student protest against themselves.

Steve X, Wesleyan student government president, reported that the recent move by the student body prompted the student government to follow suit and establish 75 independent Wesleyan student governments. Wesleyan's President would make little comment on the student body's action except to say, "They are so free-willed, I think it's cute." already told the grand jury I was too drunk to remember anything of that night."

SECRETARY BENNETT LASHES OUT AGAINST EDUCATION

(CPS) Announcing that he "never studied a day in my life", William Bennett, Reagan's Secretary of Education attacked the notion of education as being "a farce, I'm tellin' you it's a plot by the book publishers." Bennett today announced he would suggest to President Reagan that he sponser a bill which would outlaw higher education and generate peer pressure toward kids who don't play hooky in high school.

Calling honor role students "squares", Bennett announced he was really "the toughest kid in my class- I used to steal other student's homework and they were afraid to tell on me- just ask anyone." Saying all his "pissing and whining about the quality of education was to make my mom happy" Bennett added that starting immediately, his office would begin making prank phone calls to College Deans' offices "until they all quit and get real jobs."

The White House press secretary responded to Bennett's announcement at a press conference today by saying "Look! There goes Ed Messe" and running out a side door.

achieve this end, Ames stated that he wanted to spread his ministry through the country-clubs, BMW dealerships of the east and "other places where normal people congregate". "In my ministry" Ames stated "people only have to go to the church on Christmas and Easter. The rest of the time God would come to them." For his part, Jim-Bob Swiggett listened intently and asked several times "How much money did-ja make for that there college again?"

According to the tape, Ames plans to begin his evangelist mission as soon as he learns how to preach "brimfire and stone like Jimmy does". At one point Ames did express concern to swiggett over whether he would have to resort to sexual misconduct or drug addiction to become a successful huge, beautiful phallic spires; besides, circular domes suspended by pendentives and squinches are going to be totally out of style in five years, everyone knows that."

Funding for the construction of these two buildings is being syphoned from the faculty and staff salaries. Presently, pay cuts of up to 65 per cent may be mandated in order to fund the almost $7.5 million that the new admissions building, to be called the Abbey d'Ammission, will cost.

When asked about how he thought the faculty and staff will react to this kind of pay cut Ames said, "What day is it today....Tuesday.....Sunday....?"

to the administration that all radical leftist subversives be fired from the faculty and expelled from the student body." The new vice-President of SGA, previously head of Conn's "students for La-Rouche" chapter, then declared the new executive board's ideological commitment to "our oppressed brethren in Chile, Panama, and the "Dartmouth Review""

Campus reaction to the Coup has thus far been mixed. The College administration, while opposed to the new SGA leadership at first, issued a statement of "respect and admiration for the community minded spirit of the revolutionaries" on Monday. In the same written statement the College's President, Oaks Ames, also announced the launching of a sweeping new building program facilitated by a number of large anonymous gifts recieved over the weekend. Student reaction was generally apathetic due to approaching mid-terms and an abundance of SGA sponsored keg parties over the weekend. Some student groups, however, have retreated to the hills in Conn's arboretum vowing to wage a Guerilla war until the new SGA leadership is replaced. Interviewed at a Thursday night keg party, after his release from the weight-room, the deposed SGA President, Sam "papa Doc" Ceder, stated "those guys are just a bunch of really unstable people with nothing else to do on a Thursday night. I'd give them about a week before they get bored and start a "draft Manson for President" campaign or something."

NEW SECURITY CHIEF CHOSEN

to "toughen those College Wimps up!" Furthermore Jones states that he is "sick of the passive police environment engendered by weak-minded liberal arts graduates."

During the remarks he delivered at the ceremony, Jones turned to President Ames and stated "Its gonna be my job to separate the tasks of the administration and the demands of successful Law enforcement." Ames responded to this by promising that "the boys and girls of this community should be able to order Pizza with impunity during Mr. Jones tenure!"

After the ceremony, Jones kindly took the time to give the "Noise" an interview and explain his future plans for Campus security.

"I want to get rid of those pissant speed-bumps. First time I went over one of those things the shotguns on my rack near blew my head off! Tore the hell outa my CB antenna too."

Jones is advocating replacing the speed-bumps with a series of obstacles including Burmesse tiger traps and speed jumps. The design was inspired by Jones' fascination with the German D-day defenses and The Dukes of Hazzard.

Ideally, this new obstacle system would challenge and motivate students. "I don't think kids get a good enough bang for their buck 'round here. I mean kids here don't got the rigs like your muscle cars or Detroit 4x4s that we got down South. I figger kids'll have more fun round here with all the obstacles—especially when their drunk. Personally I don't believe that drunk driving can be avoided but with these obstacles the kids won't even be able to make it outa the parking lot when their drunk!"

When asked why Connecticut College students should be faced with obstacle-filled roads Jones commented "Hey, kids here play lots of golf and they should know what to do when they come to a hazzard. Besides any kid who doesn't have the sack to punch that sucker right over a jump deserves to have the bottom of his car ripped out." SAAB engineers, who have acted as consultants for the project, claim that most late model SAABs would have no difficulty clearing the jumps.

Final implementation of the plan rests on the delivery of two new South African designed armored desert patrol vehicles. The rationale is that the vehicles would be able to best stand the constant punishment inflicted by the new obstacles. In addition, a recently completed in-depth study by SGA has concluded that many other schools that Conn compares itself with own at least two armored patrol vehicles.

Admissions officials defended the action saying that "we can't afford to lose applicants because Security drives the wrong vehicles." The Trustees have subsequently allocated funds for the purchase of the two $220,000 vehicles and announced that next years tuition will be raised accordingly.

The Noise Asks: "What do you think about the 3/2 plan?"

Bob Poot ('90, Brookline Mass.)- "Seems to me they could channel this discussion through a more appropriate body since nutrition is nothing to sneeze at."

Sven Arnenberg ('88, Minnetonka, Minn.) - "The 3/2 plan is fine by me - I hate having to take eight courses a year and I could really use some more time for all my extra-curricular activities."

Jack Curren ('88, New York, NY)- "I think the plan is basidy sound, but I'm quite concerned about the anticipated increase in course alternation and the consequent loss in FTE's if the college decides not to hire more faculty. Then again...I'm outa here in a month so who gives a damn."

Mr. John M. Holmes, Dean of Faculty Trinity College - "I think all you little pukes should stop worrying about the faculty at your school and clean up your own acts. You students would see things a lot more clearly with those syringes out of your arms and your(censored) back in your pants."

WRESTLING LEGEND TO GRADUATE

By Secund Gess
and Miss L. Anneus

On Saturday, April 23, the Connecticut College Men's Wrestling team concluded its schedule with a rousing defeat of the Trinity College Game Cocks.

Victories in three weight divisions enabled the Camels to raise their record to 10-3, the best in their four-year history. The event was most significant, however, because it marked the end of an era dominated by the team's founder, Messlie "Red Eye" Williams. Now a senior, Williams is not only the team's top grappler but also its captain and driving force.

"I never wrestled formally in High School," the gregarious "Red Eye" says, "but I've always spent a lot of time rolling on the floor with other guys."

This, his final time in tights, was perhaps "Red Eye's" "best. Using his patented "Deliverance" maneuver, Williams clinched the Camels' victory by slipping behind his opponent and riding him to the mat.

"Messlie was just super out there," Camel coach, Sandy Greene, said. "When I heard him yell, 'squeal like a pig' I knew it was all over. I've never seen him so obsessed and determined. He was mounting other boys so quickly—they were terrified! It was a thrill to

"Red Eye": terror of the wrestling ring watch."

"No question," added Zeke LeRoux, Trinity's top wrestler and the object of Williams' onslaught. "He was raging out there—this was like nothing else I've ever experienced."

But there is more to this man. A volunteer at the local Boy's club and an intern for a local Proctologist, Williams plans to pursue his anatomical interests (he's a biology major) all the way to medical school.

"I've always wanted to have a hand in proctology," he says. "I've had my finger on the idea since my days as a schoolboy. I figured that my major and this internship would be a good way to get a foot in the whole thing."

His teammates and coaches

you away in the classroom! And he's got such good hands—he'll make a great doctor."

"'Red Eye' will always hold a special place in my heart," adds Greene. "He's grown so much since he's been here and he's loosened up considerably."

Williams has already been accepted at several graduate schools. "I'll probably go to John's Hopkins," He says. "They don't have a wrestling team but I don't mind. It's time to move on. Being known as 'Red Eye' will always be one of my fondest memories of Conn. but its time to explore something new."

SHLOOT WINS THIRD ANNUAL MUSICAL CHAIRS COMPETITION

By Harc LaMace

The third annual Conn. College Musical Chairs Competition, held last Thursday at the chapel green was won by Dick Shloot ('88, Crotchrot, MA). In a controversial finish, Shloot edged out surprising qualifier Rhonda Carp ('88, Paramus, NJ).

The competition, which lasted for two hours and included some 150 participants, ended when Shloot took the last chair after Carp had fallen. "The bastard tripped me" Carp later said. "He's a leech and he knows it."

For his efforts, Shloot was awarded the grand prize, a 25-pack of JoJos supplied by the competition's primary sponsor, Chucky's Turgid Chicken. Carp was awarded a bucket of bile.

The winner of the last two competitions, Dam Gollins ('88, Scarsdale, NY), was forced out in the first hour after a hemorrhoidal flare-up. Minus his dominant "Dumper Bump" maneuver, which he used to knock opponents out of his way in '86 and '87, Gollins was ineffective. "Wouldn't you know it," said Gollins. "Without the old dumper. I'm only half a man."

While Gollins' Hall-of-fame dumper rested on the sidelines, Shloot's aggressive tactics swept him to victory. In the seventeenth round, he elbowed one girl in the chest while kicking another in the crotch to gain a seat. In the thirty-first round he tripped third seeded Hunter Sproelle during Michael Jackson's "Beat it". Both times, Judge Bob Rail ruled in Shloot's favor.

"I saw nothing wrong with what Dick was doing," Rail said later in mid-JoJo. "Dick's clean as a whistle as far as I'm concerned."

However, charges of impropriety persisted. "That sonafabitch is eating JoJos that shoulda been mine!" Carp whined after the event.

"I'm not sure if he cheated or not, but he looks like a weasle to me," said Gollins. "If only I had some Preparation H."

"I don't have to defend myself," Shloot said afterwards. "I never cheated and I don't have to. This is my game and it has been since second grade. And I don't like what they've been saying about my mother chewing cud."

CAMEL BLUDGEONED!

The Connecticut College camel seen at the home sporting events will no longer be in attendance.

The camel, known for his zany court antics, including cartwheels, backflips and flatulence, was bludgeoned with his own bull horn by a mob of angry Conn. students, faculty and staff.

The massacre, which occurred at a recent mens varsity wrestling match, marked the third assault on the mascot this month.

GLADITORIAL COMBAT TO BECOME VARSITY SPORT

Responding to a spirited outcry from the College community, administration officials recently announced plans for establishing Gladitorial combat as a varsity sport in the fall of 1989. According to Julie Quinn, the College public relations director, the College "feels it is a proper time to re-introduce a sport that has been much-maligned throughout Western history. Gladitorial combat is a sport that builds strength of body and mind. We also feel certain that the introduction of this sport will help our housing crunch."

CREW IS DISBANDED, TOO BORING

The Connecticut College crew team recently disbanded after the members realized just how boring their sport actually was.
